THE PRIME MINISTER

I wanted to take the opportunity of this short respite between Games to thank you all personally for your efforts which have helped make the London 2012 Olympic Games such an overwhelming success. Many of you will have been working on delivering the Games for many years and should be truly proud at the outcome. I have had the opportunity to meet with many of you over the last few weeks and have been particularly impressed by your enthusiasm and the collaboration and joint working that you have driven across the Olympic community.

Of course we are only half way through the effort. With the Paralympics to come, I know that you will not rest on our laurels and will work just as hard to make the Paralympics a success. Based on what I have seen to date, I am confident that we can deliver an equally impressive Paralympics.

I look forward to working with you over the coming weeks, but please, in the meantime, get some well-earned rest!

With many thanks —
